Obtained evaluation "A-" in climate change 2021 by CDP

The Chiba Bank (President: Tsutomu Yonemoto) (“the Bank”) received "A-" score in the climate change 2021 by CDP <sup>[1]</sup>, a non-profit organization that is globally prestigious in the environmental field, due to its efforts for climate change and information disclosure.

"A-" is the second highest evaluation out of all eight stages from A to D-, and is the evaluation of the leadership level in environmental management.

At present, the sense of crisis regarding climate change such as frequent occurrence of abnormal weather due to global warming is spreading in the world and measures toward carbon neutrality are rapidly progressing in each country.

Based on the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD) recommendations, the Bank will further strengthen the disclosure of climate change-related information and promote efforts toward the realization of a "carbon-free society" set forth in the "Chiba Bank Group Environmental Policy."

<sup>[1]</sup> CDP: A British non-governmental organization (NGO) established in 2000. CDP collects, analyzes and evaluates information on environmental activities of major companies in the world and discloses these results. CDP collects the world's largest data on environmental behavior and it has become a global standard for environmental information disclosure.
